Certification and Accreditation; 3 Phases

The Federal Information Security Management Act (FISMA) of 2002 requires that all U.S. federal agencies certify and accredit (C&A) all information systems and major applications that are put into production on U.S. government networks. COACT's C&A department has proven expertise in helping U.S. federal agencies comply with FISMA and improve their annual Federal Computer Security Report Card scores.

Whether your agency requires assistance in setting up a C&A program, enhancing the program you already have, certifying new information systems, or validating new C&A packages, COACT can help

COACT's commitment to quality, awareness of government cost constraints, and attention to customer needs differentiate them from the C&A crowd.
